OVERVIEW

Antiquity's four 'elements' – earth, fire, air and water – have long been regarded as the mainstays of life's natural cycle. Nowhere in the Mediterranean can their contribution to horticulture be seen to such fecund and thrilling effect as on Sicily, particularly around the island's volcano, Mount Etna. Flowering trees, shrubs and plants, olives, vines and citrus groves have all thrived in Sicily's balmy climate, emerging from the mineral-laden, lava-based soil, formed from the earth's gift which has flowed down these slopes over millions of years.

In times past the luxuriant hunting parks of the Arab emirs and Norman kings, together with eighteenth century aristocratic pleasure gardens, all thrived close to the coastal cities of the island. Today, a number of remarkable modern private gardens, principally located on the eastern Ionian sea side of Sicily, grow rare, exotic plants which thrive due to the fertile slopes and plains in sight of Mount Etna. Our gently-paced visit will explore a selection of these gardens, rich in botanical variety and diverse in layout, all created through the vision of the Sicilian owner-gardeners who will be our hosts.

We shall be based in Taormina, high on a promontory of Mount Tauro, spectacularly overlooking the Gulf of Naxos and Mount Etna. Ionian Greeks left the motherland and settled at Naxos in 734 BC, founding Sicily's first Greek colony. Dionysius I of Syracuse destroyed Naxos in 403 BC and its survivors founded Tauromenion. Given the strategic importance of its location, Byzantine emperors, Arab emirs and later Spanish viceroys maintained the city. By the end of the nineteenth century Taormina was transformed into a bucolic colony for 'gentleman painters'. Artists and intellectuals flocked to its Greek remains, shady terraces and amazing views.

The tour will be led by Rachel Lamb who is an internationally known expert on the flora of Sicily. She is also the resident Head Gardener at Giardino di San Giuliano which we shall visit. Rachel will co-guide our group with the owner-designers, ensuring a highly personal introduction to these private versions of a Sicilian 'paradise'.

We shall stay at the 4* Hotel Villa Schuler situated in the historic centre. This converted fin de siècle villa is the oldest owner-run hotel in Taormina, still in the family of the original owners. The terraced garden overlooks the Gulf of Naxos with the eastern slopes of Mount Etna in the distance. Many restaurants, bars and shops are within easy walking distance of our hotel. Guests should also note that there are many steps and narrow streets in the town, though little or no vehicle traffic.

ITINERARY OUTLINE

Day 1: Thursday 21 April – We fly from Gatwick to Catania arriving mid-morning. We meet our driver and make our way up the eastern slopes of Mount Etna to visit Villa Trinità, a new garden designed by the landscape architect and artist owner of the estate. Carved from a medieval lava flow, the garden is peppered with contemporary and ancient ornamental elements and densely planted with citrus plants, grape vines and an array of trees, including the wild oak which once covered Mount Etna. We have a light private lunch on the estate after which we travel to Taormina to check-in at the 4* Hotel Villa Schuler where the remainder of the afternoon will be free for rest. Following a long day, we shall have an early dinner in a local restaurant - wine, water and coffee are included with all group lunches and dinners.

Day 2: Friday 22 April – We drive southwards the short distance to the coastal town of Acireale to visit the late nineteenth century town garden, Casa Pennisi. The area's oldest and a rare survival, the attentive owners have maintained its original iron gazebo, fountains and folly following a careful restoration of the garden and some of the adjacent fin de siècle villa which was originally a hotel. Following coffee in the garden, we travel to the outskirts of Catania to visit the home and garden created by Rossella Pezzino Geronimo. Her Stanze in Fiore di Canalicchio is a sensory journey across a number of floral rooms with rare tropical and subtropical plants inspired by her many travels. A Burmese 'secret garden', an Oriental rock garden and a marvellous Arabic irrigation system ties the disparate parts together, a fascinating whole set round the splendid Neo-classical villa which is our hostess' home. We shall enjoy lunch in the garden and a guided visit by the owner after which we return to Taormina where the evening will be free.

Day 3: Saturday 23 April – Today we drive southwards beyond Catania along the Ionian coastline of the island to visit two remarkable modern gardens. The Giardino di San Giuliano is owned by the current Marquis of San Giuliano who commissioned three distinct garden spaces: an Arabic room, a tropical room and a scented room all divided by low stone walls and enclosed by the estate's huge citrus orchard which produces a million kilos of oranges! The former estate manager and head gardener, our guide Rachel Lamb, will show us this fascinating garden and impressive citrus estate, after which we shall also enjoy a private lunch in the garden. In the afternoon we drive the very short distance to Il Biviere, the creation of Princess Maria Carla Borghese, whose daughter-in-law will be our guide. A good water supply and the fecund lava-based soil has helped the Princess fashion a series of green rooms joined by sloping banks, lined with Aleppo palms and an extraordinary array of succulents. We return to Taormina and the evening will be free.

Day 4: Sunday 24 April – Our morning of visits focus on Taormina. We walk the short distance to visit the town's Greek Theatre dating from the third century BC with later Roman additions. Dug directly from the rock of the promontory, spectators still enjoy quite extraordinary views of the Gulf of Naxos and nearby Mount Etna. We continue to Casa Cuseni where we shall be received for a private guided visit of the reception rooms of the house and terraced garden. One hundred years ago the English watercolourist, Robert Kitson, sought to escape the British winter, creating his Sicilian home as a base for his Mediterranean travels. He quickly established the house as an international art salon. Painters, poets, playwrights and politicians continued to visit when the estate's second owner, the British author Daphne Phelps, lived in the house. Her paintings and furnishings depict an idyllic Sicilian life well-lived. Sir Frank Brangwyn's murals survive in the villa as does his garden, designed as a 'Mount Etna landscape' with geometric rooms full of flowers and plants tumbling into the pathways. After lunch, not included, the remainder of the afternoon will be free for leisurely explorations of the town. We meet again in the evening for our final dinner in one of Taormina's more renowned restaurants close to the town's cathedral.

Day 5: Monday 25 April – On our final day, we depart Taormina one final time and travel southwards west of Catania to visit Parco Paternò del Toscano. Devised by renowned post-war landscape architect Enrico Paterno, the botanical garden is rich in palm varieties displayed across a number of asymmetrical rooms. Following a coffee break, we travel on to Catania for our afternoon flight to London Gatwick.
